

  r/AmItheAsshole · Posted by u/Alert_Ad9014 4 hours ago

37

AITA for not being excited for my husband's promotion?

Preface: I AM very happy and proud of his promotion. He has been in his profession for 20 years, literally since he was a teen. He recently met someone higher up and wants my husband to do the work he does. Great pay, easier on the body, consistent hours, and PTO (he's in the trades and this stuff is rare in the US).

This is a post

 MagicianGlum9206 · 4 hr. ago

Partassipant [3]

NTA-perfectly reasonable to ask and explore options, particularly with the baby, the house, life etc. He should also bring these issues up with the employer and not make it about you "allowing" him to do this. The family and the house should be the top priority.

 13   Reply  Share ...

This is a top-level comment

 stasy012 · 4 hr. ago

Asshole Enthusiast [5]

Sounds like he's worked 20 hard years for his family and deserves this

 16   Reply  Share ...

This is a top-level comment